About the F-A-E Sonata...

The F-A-E Sonata, a four-movement work for violin and piano, is a collaborative musical work by three composers: Robert Schumann, the young Johannes Brahms, and Schumann's pupil Albert Dietrich. It was composed in Düsseldorf in October 1853. It was Schumann's idea as a gift and tribute to the violinist, Joseph Joachim, whom the three composers had recently befriended. Joachim had adopted the Romantic German phrase, Frei aber einsam (free but lonely) as his personal motto. The composition's movements are all based on the musical notes F-A-E, the motto's initials, as a musical cryptogram. As the concept developed, Dietrich was allotted the first movement, Brahms the scherzo and an intermezzo, and Schumann the finale.
